SITUATION SUMMARY

Weather of Concern

- A cold upper low will move over California during the middle of this week bringing a chilly and windy end to 2014.
- For Northern California, light snow accumulations will be possible along the Sierra. However, the bigger impact will be the north winds that develop Tuesday into Wednesday. Trees remain drought-stressed may be more susceptible to being toppled than normal. The strong north winds are also an atypical direction for Solano County, and could lead to exacerbated downed tree issues.
- For Southern California, rain is going to be the problem in elevations below 2500 feet with snow above that level. Travel headaches are sure to be the rule on New Year's Eve. Snow expected in Southeast California Deserts and Mountains Tuesday through Wednesday afternoon. Up to 2 inches in most desert locations, including Joshua Tree National Park and the I-5 Grapevine, and 4 to 6 inches over higher elevations. Snow levels will drop to 2000 feet by early Wednesday morning. Very low temps are forecast for San Diego for New Years Eve with coastal area temps ranging from 32 to 41 degrees.
- Cal OES Southern Region has polled its OA's and one county (Santa Barbara) intends to open Warming Centers. No OAs anticipate activating EOCs for the projected storm this week.
- High Wind Warning in effect from 1600 Tuesday through 1000 Wednesday for the Sierra Nevada from Yosemite to King's Canyon (portions of Fresno, Madera, Mariposa, and Tuolumne Counties).
- Winter Storm Warning in effect from 1600 Tuesday to 0400 Thursday above 2000 feet for the Eastern Mojave Desert Including the Mojave National Preserve and Morongo Basin (portions of San Bernardino County).

WEATHER SYNOPSIS BY REGION:

NORTHERN CALIFORNIA

A relatively cold weather system dropping south through the Pacific Northwest east of the Cascades will cross Northern California tonight and Tuesday. Not a lot of precipitation is expected with this system where it falls, which will mostly be near and east of the Cascade/Sierra crest and possibly along the Oregon border west of the crest as well. The most notable weather event with this system will be very strong north to east winds that will develop tonight and last through Wednesday. Wind gusts 50 to 70 mph are expected Tuesday and Tuesday night, strongest near the crest. Wind speeds will decrease Wednesday morning, but notable off shore flow will continue into New Year's Day. With very moist soil conditions of late, there will be a possibility of trees being blown down. Afternoon high temperatures for the next few days will also be somewhat below normal with the warmest inland valley areas 48-54. Dry, seasonably warm conditions (mostly mid-40's and 50's) and light winds will return for the New Year's weekend. Areas of overnight and morning valley fog will be possible then as well.

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA

Northwest flow aloft will maintain temperatures around 5 degrees below normal and minimum humidity in the teens away from the Central Valley today. Maximum temperatures will be in the 40s across the mountains and mid-50s to mid-60s in the valleys. Westerly winds of 20 to 30 mph with gusts to 50 mph will surface across the desert passes through tonight. A cold area of low pressure from Canada will drop southward into the region causing temperatures to become 10 to 15 degrees below normal Tuesday through Thursday. Mountain temperatures will be in the mid-20s to mid-30s while the valleys will be in the mid-40s to mid-50s. This low pressure area will also bring scattered showers with less than a quarter inch of rainfall to the region Tuesday and Wednesday. The snow level will be around 2,000 feet. Offshore winds of 20 to 40 mph with gusts to 60 mph will surface across the mountains and below the canyons and passes of Southern California Tuesday night through Wednesday morning. Temperatures will warm and humidity will drop into the teens away from the Central Valley Friday through this weekend as a strong ridge of high pressure builds into California from the Pacific Ocean.
